Tuesday, May 20, 2010 "War is a racket!" There was always something suspicious about the two-party system. Madison Avenue never understood the electorate. So the campaign commercials got only a few minutes and then "junk" television shows were back until the next campaign. So who cared what the candidates said? Half the population was illiterate. And even if you could read, there was no campaign literature. Sure, politicians changed their positions, but half of what they told us was pork. Half of what we paid for was not used. So why was there an election season? From the beginning, there has always been a "bad" and a "good" candidate. From the beginning, there has always been a political party. And if your party was in control, no matter how many people were killed, no matter how the country was plundered, whatever you had to say, they would agree with you. Then the pendulum swung too far and an economy based on a military-industrial complex became so powerful that the good and bad guys were reversed. Republicans became the bad guys. Then Democrats became the good guys. Then liberals became the bad guys. Who would win the next election? Since the Reagan years, there has been one of them, the other one, and we always end up back here with no opposition party. All politics are local. So our national party, the party that supposedly represents you, is controlled by special interests. The banking industry, Wall Street, Morgan Stanley, Citibank, Bank of America, you name it, controls the party that is supposed to represent your interests. Republicans are the party of Wall Street and banks, and if the banks wanted to have little kids and live in their momma's basements, they could take over the Republican party. Then nobody would have a job. Then the Republican party would be run by slave hunters. Then we'd be a third-world country. Why have a party that is controlled by a few people? Why be ruled by a puppet of corporations? We already have a two-party system. Why can't we be a one-party system?
