The University of Oregon's foreign policy and Africa programs have been put on hiatus until March, the university's president said. The move follows the recent deaths of UO graduate student Otto Warmbier and University of Virginia professor Timothy Karr, who both had worked with the programs. The decision was announced Thursday in an email to faculty from President Michael Schill, who also wrote that he was requesting "an in-depth investigation into the circumstances of Otto Warmbier's death and the wrongful conviction and imprisonment in North Korea of University of Oregon faculty member Timothy Karr." Karr, the associate professor of public policy, was arrested in December 2016 and sentenced to 15 years of hard labor for allegedly stealing a propaganda poster from his hotel in Pyongyang, according to the University of Oregon. He was released June 13, 2017. "Despite being in the custody of North Korea for over 16 months, Mr. Karr's heart and spirit has remained unchanged," UO spokesperson Matt Jackson wrote in an email on Thursday to the Statesman Journal. "As he conducts a ministry with Korean pastors and attempts to understand the system he lives in, he reflects on the injustices he experienced and tries to make sense of them. He has written about the experience of being in North Korea and his recent visit to the country in this way." Karr could not be reached Thursday for comment 3da54e8ca3
