FIFA (from FIFA Basic Interaction Framework) is an all-encompassing set of new features being introduced this year, at the core of which is the ability to play your opponent. In FIFA, players have two sets of instructions which run concurrently. The first is your on-field experience, which you can alter through each task performed. The second is a series of rules, or "Instructions", which take you through all the steps of the game; from managing the ball to controlling the sideline. Each of these elements is controlled through the revamped controls system, which uses the right analog stick to control these elements. It's quicker and easier to understand than ever before, and it's used in a brand new way, to ensure that your on-field experience won't deviate from the way you'd expect.
