======================= This study was financially supported by the Deputy of Research and Technology of Hamadan University of Medical Sciences. DESCRIPTION: (Applicant's Abstract) Multiple myeloma (MM) is a fatal cancer of terminally differentiated B lymphocytes, which is characterized by production of a monoclonal immunoglobulin (Ig) with detrimental effects. Despite considerable progress in understanding MM pathogenesis, there are currently no definitive effective therapies for this disease. Novel therapeutic approaches that target the MM tumor itself are needed. Thus, the overall objective of this project is to identify a therapeutic target that will aid in the elimination of the cancer cell. The applicant proposes that the absence of a normal ABL oncogene family kinase, BCR-ABL, results in the loss of control of key cellular regulators that are essential for growth and survival of MM cells, and that reintroduction of BCR-ABL gene function into this setting will change the nature of the MM cell to a malignant cell that is rapidly eliminated. The specific aims are to: 1) test the hypothesis that inhibition of BCR-ABL
