Inside: Video Games on Tape

Hi there!

Well, it was THE FIRST time I've cooked a vlog. After over 2 weeks of shaky footage, I finally got all video editing worked out so I decided to get in the game as much as possible and record some videos about video games.

Aside from the occasional boom mic and a poor quality laptop webcam, I basically tried to do everything a gamedev on a budget could do. There was even a come-back kid.

On the first tape there are two sections.

PART 1: A new devices and systems test. What I got here was a dirt cheap stereo microscope, which I've since used to paint, oil, draw, and pretty much everything else beside play games.

PART 2: A game tour, you'll see what I've been playing outside of Super Mario Bros

Preview Streaks are coming to Fan Pack In NBA 2K16's just-revealed (yes, I actually had to go to an NPC to find this information), Streaks-like Fan Packs are joining the list of things one can buy in the package. These Fan Packs come in quantities of 30 units, 15 units, seven units, three units, or one. Conveniently, one unit is $1.50. (The higher-level packs are, in fact, all selling for $1.50 and they're all also selling for $10.) It seems as if Fan Pack purchasers will be having to wait a bit for their streaked items, though. This was the answer I received from 2K in a brief but informative chat on the topic: "Q: Can I get streaked items such as No Association and Favors? A: NOPE. The licenses have already been applied. So in other words, you have the option to buy the upgrades your self if you want to. The only thing that is streaked is NBA 2K16 versions. You will however be able to get Your Player and team jerseys with NBA 2K16 versions." Since I'm a fan pack buyer -- even for that brief exchange -- I wish I knew that there was a version of the game available with streaked items. If all of this is true, then I would have been happier. The way items are chosen doesn't much address this concern and it seems like the only person who will probably be looking out for weird things like the streaked items is 2K. I don't think they'd have much reason to do it, though.

New Delhi: With the government announcing its decision on holding the general elections in Jammu and Kashmir, nearly seven million voters in the state have joined the polls. As the results for those who submitted their applications to secure the biometric identity cards are still on, online voting has been made virtual in Jammu region. The process was started on Monday on the order of the J&K Election Commission, which, in a statement on Monday said information about the cards had been sent to the Voter Service Centres in 21,552 polling stations. The centre wrote that everything had been completed for online voting for the 141 lakh electorate in Jammu region from 7pm on Monday till 6:30pm on Wednesday. A statement issued by the Election Commission on Monday said
