The 67-year-old retired teacher and amateur competitive croquet player was diagnosed with late stage Alzheimer’s in 2014. Her mind is sharp, she still paints and enjoys crafts, but every day she struggles with remembering where she left her car keys or her cellphone. That’s why she joined the Global Relay of Hope in Philadelphia for National Alzheimer’s Disease Awareness Week, which begins Monday and continues through next Saturday. “As an educator, I’m concerned about how I am going to care for my children. But when you
