Maine Raha Sepa Magar Mere Sajne ka Badsha Mulay hey!!!Q: Merging HTML into one big string I have a simple web service that returns JSON/XML to a mobile application and I was wondering what would be the best way to deliver the JSON data to the mobile application instead of having the JSON in two separate files. Should I merge the two HTML files that the JSON is output to into one large HTML file using a JavaScript string (which is probably very inefficient) or is there a more efficient way to do this? A: There are no good reasons to make one big string with all the HTML. In fact doing so might cause you to have to write a lot of code that is not really needed. What you'd really want is a combination of HTML and JSON. You can make JSON objects and JSON strings with the JSON methods of object literals. This would result in a response like this: { "HTML": "Hello" "JSON":

"{"HTML":"Hello"}"} This can be read by the mobile app by accessing the root object. If you would like to know how you can access the root object in JavaScript you can see how you would do that here. Effects of sympathetic nerve stimulation, acute adrenergic blockade and K+-induced depolarization on release of prolactin from rat prolactin cells in culture. The effects of 5-hydroxytryptamine (5-HT), norepinephrine (NE), gamma-aminobutyric acid (GABA), alpha-adrenergic blockade, and K+-induced depolarization on spontaneous and K+-evoked release of prolactin (PRL) were examined in rat prolactin cells in culture. 5-HT and NE each released PRL in a time- and dose-dependent manner. A 50% effective concentration of 5-HT for the stimulation of PRL release was 5.5 X 10<sup>(-7)</sup> M, and that of NE was 5.3 X 10<sup>(-7)</sup> M.

Both NE and 5-HT released PRL to the same extent. Phentolamine ( $1.5 \times 10^{-6}$  M) inhibited completely the spontaneous and  $K^+$ -evoked release of PRL. Reduction of extracellular  $Na^+$  to 0.8 mM, which depolarized prolactin cells, released PRL. Intracellular  $K^+$  applied by microelectrodes stimulated PRL release. This  $K^+$ -induced release was blocked by tetraethylammonium (5.4 mM), guanidinium chloride (20 mM), and dicyclohexylcarbodiimide ( $5 \times 10^{-5}$  M). These observations suggest that the spontaneous and  $K^+$ -evoked release of PRL is regulated by the activity of an intracellular membrane-bound  $K^+$ -sensitive system. The release of PRL by NE and 5-HT may involve this  $K^+$ -sensitive system, which is activated by depolarization. Q: What determines the initial direction
