Weak Research, Weak Management, and High Costs: Health Care Spending Falls Short of Mission. We review the trends in U.S. health care spending for 2013 and 2014, which are the latest available, and note that while most health spending has declined, spending per beneficiary has increased by >50% since 2000. Despite almost 20% real spending growth over the past decade, health outcomes have fallen behind other countries.
