The Care Alliance National Care Home Plan is aimed at improving the quality of care and supporting people to live and work at home, which is at the heart of the Welsh Government's response to Wales' ageing population. The Care Alliance is a not-for-profit provider of social care and health care that delivers services across Wales from five care homes, four nursing homes and four community care homes. The plan was officially opened in Cardiff in June 2015 by Alun Davies MP, who is Cabinet Secretary for Health and Social Services, and has resulted in a range of measures to improve the quality of older people's care in Wales. The Care Alliance Care Home Plan is a flagship initiative for the future caring delivery system in Wales. Dignity and our Future – Care at Home in Wales' Post-Planning Review responds to the Welsh Government's Post-Planning Review of social care commissioned by the National Assembly for Wales. Caring at Home – The Way Forward for Social Care in Wales, the Care Alliance's Post-Planning Review, produced in collaboration with the Department of Health, was launched in Cardiff on Tuesday 23 April 2016. The National Care Home Project is building on the success of the Care Alliance's Care at Home, including through new training and educational programmes. The programme will build on the substantial resources already invested in the Care at Home programme including increasing the number of care homes to eight and expanding the number of places. The current Care at Home project has supported an increase in hours of care at homes in the North and South of Wales. As part of the Care Alliance National Care Home Plan, the new programme will invest in the care and education of older people and people with disabilities to help them live as independently as possible at home.Gashorn Bearden, Jr. Gashorn David Bearden Jr. (July 6, 1923 – November 27, 2015) was an American dentist who specialized in preventative dentistry. Su principalÂ .Dating app Hinge is now offering Matching grants to small businesses, including event coordinators, bartenders, and waitstaff who date couples who are using the app. The $50 million venture-capital backed startup rolled out its offering on April 23rd. While the competition is open to any business seeking help in hitting couples up, the Matching grants are especially geared towards the 60,000 businesses who have small events each year. These events feature six to eight people in attendance, with no more than five per couple. According to a company blog post, this is also "an opportunity to get on the radar of people in your industry who are part of a network that regularly go out on double dates." Hinge Dating apps have been a popular way to meet new people and I'm personally looking to make more use of them. That's why I'm a little bummed to say that I was recently turned down by Hinge. Don't get me wrong - it's a great app with lots of potential, but it's more for hookups. I tried the app out and it's very simple. You sign in, pick the type of date you're interested in, and then when the other person accepts, a "date" message pops up with a timestamp and picture of the person. It looks like everyone on the app is also using this feature, because we have all been swiping through pages of messages on the same date at the same time. But that's the problem with it. It's a free service, and the only difference between $20 a month and $25 a month is that the latter gives you a profile and picture. Other than that, you have absolutely no way of knowing what's going on with someone else on the app. I have no doubt that Hinge is a great dating app for people looking for quick hookups. But if you want a real date, you need to pay. At least you can pay by the month. Check out Hinge to see if it works for you. How do you use dating apps? Why are they so popular?
