Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image sensor and in particular to a CMOS image sensor which is capable of an one-chip operation. 2. Related Art In a semiconductor integrated circuit, a CMOS sensor is used in order to reduce power consumption in an analog circuit and to assure performance. As a method of preparing a CMOS sensor, a basic device structure is disclosed in Japanese laid-open patent application No. HEI 8-143255. FIG. 1 is a cross sectional view of a conventional CMOS sensor. This CMOS sensor is disclosed in Japanese laid-open patent application No. HEI 8-143255. In this CMOS sensor, a P type substrate 1, a P type well 2, a N channel Si memory MOSFET 3, a floating diffusion region 4, a transfer gate MOSFET 5, a wiring 6 which applies a voltage to the floating diffusion region 4 from a pixel well, an N.sup.- diffusion region 7 and an N.sup.- diffusion region 8 which apply an electric charge to the floating diffusion region 4 are formed in the P type well 2. A PN junction of the N.sup.- diffusion region 7 and the P type well 2 is connected to an input terminal IN of the CMOS sensor through the transfer gate MOSFET 5. A PN junction of the N.sup.- diffusion region 8 and the P type well 2 is connected to a P.sup.+ diffusion region 11 through a contact 9. The P.sup.+ diffusion region 11 functions as a source of the N channel MOSFET 3. The P.sup.+ diffusion region 11 is connected to the wiring 6 through a P.sup.+ diffusion region 13. An electric charge stored in the N.sup.- diffusion region 7 is transferred through the transfer gate MOSFET 5, and then is transferred to the floating diffusion region 4 through the wiring 6. This electric charge is sensed by the N channel MOSFET 3. The output of the N channel MOSFET 3 is input to an amplifier circuit 14 to be amplified, and then is output from the CMOS sensor. However, in this CMOS sensor, when an electric charge is read out, an electric charge in the N.sup.- diffusion region
